As usual, Coach Bud Finger's varsity golfers proved themselves to be one of the finest college squads in the nation. In their triumphant performances against the best private and intercollegiate opposition that could be found, they seem to be a sound bet to repeat their PCC mastery both in conference dual matches and at the Northern California Intercollegiate tournament. With these laurels under their belt, they will proceed to the NCAA tournament with the purpose of boosting last year's sixth place finish to equal their championship performance of 1953. Leading this deep and well-balanced team are Fred Brown and Warren Dailey, who are both in their third year of varsity competition. Brown's rhythmic swing and steady par golf have kept him at the head of the team for the last two years, while Dailey's tremendous power and sensational sub-par bursts have made him one of the most feared match-play collegiate golfers in the country. Chuck Van Linge and Phil Getchel are two sound junior lettermen who are back again this year in increased brilliance. John Brodie has proven the sophomore sensation, taking time out from football to earn a steady starting berth on the first six, the coveted sixth spot is being scrapped over by John Forbush, Ray Silliman, and Dave Diffenderfer, while Bill Irwin, Craig Callahan, Bob Lindsey, Bill Geyer, Bob Fanin, and Bud Barnes are the beginning of the almost limitless reserves that Finger has at his command to field on the long and exacting Stanford course.
