Coach Bud Finger

Stanford's golf team shows promise this year, with three strong contenders in the first three spots. Jim Rheim, Jerry Hanweck, and Bill Sechrest are golfers as strong as any in collegiate competition today. Rheim did well in last year's NCAA championships, and with an improved putting and short iron game he could do even better in 1964. The remaining three positions will probably go to Bob Ireland, Jeff Johnson, and Mike Jennings, all of whom could develop enough to give the squad real depth as well as individual strength. Coach Bud Finger has high hopes for a strong team in conference competition and, perhaps, on the national level.

Jerry Hanweck displays winning form on the Stanford golf course.
